CALL FOR PAPERS

Jotwell seeks short reviews of (very) recent scholarship related to the law that the reviewer likes and thinks deserves a wide audience. The ideal Jotwell review does not merely celebrate scholarly achievement, but situates it in the context of other scholarship in a manner that explains to both specialists and non-specialists why the work is important.

Although gentle critique is welcome, reviewers should choose the subjects they write about with an eye toward identifying and celebrating work that makes an original contribution, and that will be of interest to others. See the Jotwell website for examples.

Reviews need not be written in a particularly formal manner. Contributors should feel free to write in a manner that will be understandable to scholars, practitioners, and even non-lawyers.

Ordinarily, a Jotwell contribution will

- be between 500-1000 words;
- focus on one work, ideally a recent article, but a discussion of a recent book is also welcome;
- begin with a hyperlink to the original work—in order to make the conversation as inclusive as possible, there is a strong preference for reviews to focus on scholarly works that are freely available online. That said, reviews of articles that are not freely available online, and also of very recent books, are also welcome.
